

Amplifying the Parent Voice

Educators and administrators are often not proficient in supporting, and engaging families- particularly those traditionally left behind.

CPLAN's goal is to train & empower parents as active leaders, giving them the skills to partner with educators to ensure their children have access to quality education.

About Us

CPLAN is an organization led by parents using lived experience to work in partnership with education stakeholders -parents, community leaders, legislators, educators and school administrators- working to achieve equity in education.

We strive to create thriving self-reliant parents in their advocacy for their children through training, coaching and community building.

THE CHALLENGE

Many parents feel they do not have the ability, expertise, or authority to advocate for equitable educational outcomes for their children, or to question practices and policies.

Diverse learners with social/emotional needs, especially those impacted by trauma from immigration, incarceration and violence, typically do not have access to equitable educational outcomes.

THE SOLUTION

Equipping parents and families with the tools they need to become the best advocates for their children's academic, social and emotional success by holding education stakeholders accountable for equitable education.

We take an asset based approach towards system's change by working with the skills, experience and comfort level of parents to increase advocacy on local, district and statewide levels including legislative bills of education.
